He's been doing them for a few years, considering popular themes and experimenting with gaana-based songs for them. We catapulted him to fame, however, not in his musical tribute to leading Tamil stars like Vijay and Ajith or his amma mood songs. Popularity is the result of a Tamil song centered around COVID-19 awareness, loosely based on the melody of the 1987 Tamil film number Madurai Marikkozhunthu. Released in March, the song has witty lyrics and catchy beat, spreading attention to health guidelines; it also take digs at China.Since then, the 31-year-old singer has been rechristened "China Sudhakar" in his neighborhood This song has brought me to new heights, says Sudhakar, That the track spreading awareness gained popularity gives me a lot of joy. We don't usually like to listen to other people's advice; that's exactly what this song does, but it still caught people's attention. The 1.2 million people on YouTube and more than 3,000 comments stand as testimony to that. Sudhakar has worked on two other COVID-19 awareness numbers. Early in my career, I made a lot of mistakes singing about negative things. Thanks to Gaana Bala, I moved towards positivity and cheerfulness. He is one of a handful of singers who use gaana, a popular music genre that usually consists of lyrics by Madras baashai, to create COVID-19 awareness. With proper tributeLike gaana, naatupura folk-style songs are also designed to do the same. Singer Velmurugan, popular tamil film songs such as Otha Sollala (Aadukalam) and Kathari Poovazhagi (Asuran), have also come up with four songs in the past few months. If the Thaaai Manne..., written by the film's lyricist Ilaya Kamban, had a Thanksgiving with health professionals, cops and government official working during the pandemic, the other songs, Idhu Enna Ulagamada and Ulle Po highlighted the labors that people face and advised everyone to stay home. I worked with the police on a song titled Kaakhi Sattai, says the singer, who also starred in the awareness short film Pachai Mandalam.Meanwhile, at Gummidipoondi, police officer R Sasikala has been writing and singing songs about COVID-19 awareness since March. Some tracks, Kollu Corona and Neelvom, have already appeared on Facebook and gained acclaim among audiences, while the third in the series, Palanaala, is ready for release. Singing gives me a lot of happiness, she says. As a police officer, he sometimes has a 24-hour shift from 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 a.m., which works at and outside the station. We get a break for a few this shift, and that's when you sing and shoot these videos after obtaining proper permission, says Sasikala, who has vivid memories of reverent songs from the government-run music school Pudukottai a few years ago and works on devoted albums by Sai Baba and Shiva.She says that any such learning will help her today. The people who loved my songs have already asked me to think about a future song, during which hopefully there will be a vaccine. I imagined people chasing the COVID-19 virus.
